

Harley Robinson

The Secrets of the Sea

How many secrets can the ocean hold:

Is it too deep to discover?

The secrets that were never told,

May be secrets from one another;

Many try to find out what it hides:

Then some will forever try to find,

How many secrets it has disguised,

But few leave the secrets behind;

Every fish will carry secrets too;

Fish in the sea will swim very deep,

And the fish could tell but never do;

For it is a promise they must keep

The fish and the sea are friends;

They keep their secrets 'til the end