The Dog's Adventure

How did a dog wind up wearing a cheetah dress, a black wig and sitting with a bone and bagel? Well there was a little dog, a bulldog, and it didn't have a family or home. It was cold and he was hungry. He walked up to a house and scratched on the door until someone answered. It was a little old lady who had an obsession with cheetah print items. She took pity on the dog and let him inside. She immediately started sneezing and coughing. She assumed she was allergic and decided she had to put it back out on the street but, she gave it a cheetah print dog sweater before she left on the doorstep. The dog walked a while then came to another door and scratched. When the door opened it was a young man with long black hair and black clothes. The man felt bad for the dog and took it in. He enjoyed the dog for a while but then discovered it shed too much and must go. Before he put it out though, he put a long black wig on the dog's head to keep it warm. The dog started walking again and all of the sudden he caught a whiff of something delicious and followed the scent to a red door. A large man opened that door wearing a white chef shirt and hat. He crouched in the doorway rubbing the dog's head wishing he could bring him inside. He knew he could (because it was a bakery) so he threw the dog a large bagel and went back to work. Satisfied, the dog picked up the bagel and trotted down an alley to find a place to sleep. He found a place by a dumpster and was about to eat when he decided he needed something else. So he leaped into the dumpster and ruffled around until he emerged carrying a big, juicy bone. He plopped down on the ground and ate his bagel. He then sat gnawing contently on the bone, drifting in and out of sleep.
